

INFORMATION

Date: January 2007

Rob Clark, Consultant

A Project Management Specialist since 1990, Rob Clark brings to Rhema his long and impressive experience of providing Project Management and Project Support Services to both public and private sectors, through involvement with contractor and client organizations at all levels in the UK and overseas.

He is a Member of the Institute of Management Consultants and of the Association for Project Managers, and before going into consultancy he was Head of Project Control for WS Atkins, one of Europe's largest engineering and management consultancies where he had major input to projects as diverse as Submarine Command and Control systems for the MoD (Ministry of Defence) and international garden festivals.

Rob's key experience includes project/programme management; business change management; IT project management support services; development of project control and support systems, risk analysis and management; and project management training.

His qualifications embrace Mechanical Engineering and accreditation from the OGC Centre of Excellence in consultancy. His engineering background has been an important factor in his ability to provide consultancy to major organisations within the manufacturing and construction industries. His work has included organisational studies in manufacturing, maintenance project work in the construction and computer systems industries, as well as project management consultancy in Government agencies.

Rob has been engaged in a number of large, multi-disciplinary change programmes within Government. Other recent assignments have included Project and Programme Management consultancy in the new world HQ of Barclays Bank; study and implementation of recommendations for a major IT project in the Department for Communities and Local Government; provision of training to senior managers of global leasing organisation De Lage Landen in Europe, the USA, Australia and Brazil; and programme and project management support for a major change initiative which took local authority staff into OFSTED (Office for Standards in Education).

His long list of clients also includes ICL, the Prudential, Queens University Belfast, South West Water and the National School of Government – where he is currently an Associate Lecturer.

He has also been a visiting lecturer for City University, London.

Contacts...

For further information and interviews contact Terri Anderson

T: + 44 1494 565864

M: + 44 7802 872346

E: hq@rhemagroup.com

Notes to Editors

The Rhema Group www.rhemagroup.com is a highly respected and well-established UK human resource development company which also operates globally. Founded in 1985 by MD Jeremy Francis, Rhema (a name derived from the Greek for inspired word) has won a solid reputation for innovation, quality and reliability of delivery of people development and performance.

Focusing on Talent Development, Management Development, Performance Management, Sales Training and Skills Development, Rhema provides on a 24/7 basis customised and blended solutions involving business consultancy, assessment/psychometrics, training, coaching, software and E-learning (via internet and client intranets).

Rhema Group includes a roster of talented and experienced UK consultants, and through 15 international partners of best practitioner status in Europe, USA, South Africa, Australia and S.E. Asia, Rhema delivers proprietary products and services globally in a variety of languages – in particular to multinationals looking for high quality, customised and consistent international roll-out of centrally mandated people development programmes and assessments. Clients include Microsoft, Société Générale, Reed Business Information, BOC Group, International Financial Data Systems, Institution of Civil Engineers and leading Dutch vendor lease organisation De Lage Landen.