Rhema Group sharpens its focus on £500bn public sector via SourceUK

With its acknowledged expertise and 22-years of experience in offering a comprehensive range of HR training and development programmes and products, Rhema Group has taken up an invitation to join SourceUK Procurement Portfolio, the impressive web-based public service sector resource.

“This excellent professional news and information service is exactly where Rhema Group should be making itself available to public sector managers in the wide variety of fields – from business continuity, e-learning, education and finance to performance and risk management, recruitment and customer service training – in this £500bn sector”, said Rhema Group MD Jeremy Francis.

SourceUK.net, which comments that it is “delighted to be working with Rhema Group”, provides a portal for the public service industry through which public service managers and private sector suppliers can connect. The SourceUK e-procurement database lists providers of best value products, services and solutions to the UK Government and Public Sector.

This portal also provides, free at the point of access, useful and up-to-date information from over 80 Government departments, agencies and other Public Sector organisations; independent comment on the latest developments and trends; notification of consultations, best practice, new initiatives, etc; Government news releases and hot links to relevant full background documents; and a platform for debate.

Jeremy Francis adds: “For a reputable and highly professional company like ours it is important that SourceUK also encourages suppliers to provide generic information about developments in technology and service provision, which will assist Public Sector managers in forming policies, strategies and specifications.

“Rhema Group fully endorses the value of such a service. We ourselves are a rich information resource in fields of people development, training and coaching, via our own website’s free services such as Weekly Tips- to which we will soon be adding a brand new online library of training and learning knowhow and materials, the Rhema Resource Centre.”
